

I really don't know where to start! we have a son who is 33years old, and now in a stable relationship and engaged, they have a son of 9 months old. As far as we know he is no longer using anything, but his personality is very unstable, he is calm but with drawn one minute and a mad person the next, but as far as we know it is only with us! They came for the weekend two weeks ago, but she was so rude to me and made him take her home (they live in Sussex, we live in Norfolk) on the Sunday morning, we don't think he is nasty to her and appears to be a very loving dad, he isn't rude to my mother, but when he rings us he never asks after anyone in the family, he doesn't speak to his brother, he was very nasty and said the most awful things to him a few years ago, yet he told my husband he would like to speak to his brother again, we should have all gone to his brothers house on the sunday afternoon, he never bothered to ring and apologise for not going to see him. We don't know if his fiance is part of the problem as he told us two years ago that she finds it difficult us being a family when hers is split up, her mum and dad have been divorced for twenty years and she has a sister she hardly sees. He left the weekend saying "I'm sorry for how the weekend has turned out, and I love you both" she never even said "Goodbye" or let us say goodbye to our grandson!He text me on the Monday to say untell I learnt not to be rude to him and show him respect he did'nt want anymore to do with me, he then text my husband and said he was a gutless loser and it was his loss! We are at our wits end as we don't know what to do, is it the drugs? is it his fiance? or have we turned a loving happy son into a monster? he has also blamed me for the way he is and said I had brought him up wrong! if so why hasn't his brother turned out the same! We know he was smoking something at the age of sixteen, and got into a lot worse while at University, as far as we can work out he has been free for about four years, would he still be affected or was the damage done? Any help or advise would be gratefully received!